Republic of the Union of Myanmar Office of the President

Message of Greetings sent by President U Win Myint on occasion of 69th Anniversary Kayah State Day celebration (15 January 2021)

DEAR ESTEEMED ethnic national brothers and sisters residing in Kayah State,

On this auspicious special occasion of the 69th Anniversary of Kayah State Day, I wish to send good wishes and greetings to all Kayah ethnic nationals and Union-born ethnic national brothers and sisters living in Kayah State to be blessed with good fortune, prosperity and auspiciousness.

In Kayah State, nine Kayah racial groups, as well as Bamars, Kayins, Shans, Pa-Os and Innthas have lived in close friendship together since ancient times. In accordance with the 1947 Constitution, Karreni State became one of the states of the Union of Burma; later in accordance with the Constitutional Amendment Act of 1951, Karreni State was officially designated as Kayah State beginning from 15th January 1952 by popular referendum. The date on which "Karreni State" was called "Kayah State" was designated as Kayah State Day, and we have now reached 69 years. Every year we have celebrated Kayah State Day on a grand scale attended by throngs of people with exhibition rooms for ethnic culture, dance contests for ethnic national traditional dances, musical entertainments, boat races, sports competitions, paddy pounding competitions, bazaars and exhibitions for various merchandise. However, to my great regret, because of the COVID-19 pandemic all over the world, we are not able to celebrate this event on a grand scale as in previous years.

Starting from the time the COVID-19 disease first occurred in Myanmar, Kayah State worked to the utmost to contain the spread of the infection and was able to contain the infection spread to a certain extent. Kayah State became the state with the least amount of positive cases.

Statement of Myanmar National Human Rights Commission on COVID-19 and Vaccination Statement No. (1/ 2021)

- 2020 is annus horribilis for Myanmar as with the rest of the world due to the scourge of COVID-19 pandemic that engulfed the globe. The well being of humanity itself was significantly undermined with serious implications for social, economic and political situations of effected countries and Myanmar was not spared either.
- In such dire circumstances, the drive to ensure human rights for all human beings apparently lost momentum and often even regressed in some places. The pandemic directly threatens the right to life and health while indirectly compromising many other basic rights relating to work, equity, information, indiscrimination, education, freedom of movement and in some instances freedom of expression. Human rights were at times overlooked in the struggle against COVID-19 where Governments choose to mobilize the public to rally behind them in their concerted effort to overcome the pandemic threat.
- There have been concerns on and reports of increased human rights violations in the shadow of the pandemic in the form of discrimination, domestic violence, summary dismissals of employees, extreme restriction of movement and expression, denial of the right to information, internal displacement and forced migration as well as additional barriers against access to education and COVID-19 treatment.
- Myanmar society has been blessed with socio-cultural capital to ameliorate many of those aforementioned rights violations through compassion and empathy yet there could had been isolated cases of transgressions and the authorities has tried their utmost to rectify them.
- Nowadays, the advent of COVID-19 vaccine developed by many companies has raised hopes in the new year, and 2021 promises to be the turning point in the effort to counter the pandemic threat. However, despite the World Health Organization's (WHO) efforts to advocate equitable allocation of vaccines around the world vaccine politics seems to have eclipsed humanitarian considerations and rich and powerful countries are appropriating the limited stocks by securing advance purchase even before the actual productions began and formal approval given by competent regulating agencies. There have also been some concerns about the efficacy of the vaccine.
- Due to the concerted efforts of our leaders Myanmar is able to secure supplies of vaccines from India to cover a substantial portion of our population and further arrangements are reportedly being made to get more from friendly countries to satisfy our needs. This effort not only requires a huge expenditure of foreign currency for purchase but also more financial, human and logistical resources to store, transport, distribute and finally administer the medicine which needs to be kept at extremely cold temperature. Given our relatively large population spread over vast territory with a varied topography, it would be a huge, complex and demanding task for the authorities concerned. An endeavour without precedence that would stretch our meagre resources to the limit.
- Meanwhile, as it is impossible to vaccinate everyone at the same time and the limited availability of vaccine there is a need to develop a priority scheme for inoculation. Everybody would agree that front line health workers, including volunteers, should have the right to be immunized as the first cohort. Ranking the various sections of the population in the vaccination sequence is more difficult though we can learn from the experience of other countries which had already started the vaccination process. However, the priority scheme for Myanmar cannot be a copy of another country, and it should be developed in the Myanmar context where social, cultural, economic and political circumstances are different and perhaps even unique in its own way. No doubt the authorities concerned are aware of those and would come up with the best fit for our country and people.
- Nevertheless, the MNHRC believes that a human rights perspective can complement various other considerations in producing the best solution possible. In this way, multiple rights may be fulfilled while enhancing the right to life and health of our people. In that respect what comes across as potential candidates for early vaccinations are certain sections of society who themselves may not be seen as vulnerable as old persons and those with underlying illnesses or hold important positions in the administrative hierarchy but are prone to have multiple contacts and interactions with the population at large through their functions and services. They may be identified as: schoolteachers, transport workers, service workers in banking retailing, food and beverages and manufacturing, street vendors, and food sellers. This is not an exhaustive list and given the fluid nature of their work and their roaming nature it could be quite taxing to track some of them down, but the benefits of immunizing those with a high potential for passing on the virus to the larger population could outweigh the difficulties involved.

Therefore, I wish to record my appreciation individually to all those who have participated in the COVID-19 protection, control and treatment activities with goodwill and metta to the fullest extent on a voluntary basis, taking on any of the assigned duties; and also to all the ethnic national brothers and sisters who have followed the health instructions and awareness bulletins scrupulously.

At the present time, we are carrying out the COVID-19 protection, control and treatment activities all over the country with full momentum; at the same time, our Union Government has been working for all-round development all across the Union as well as the harmonious development of all states and regions. In Kayah State also, we have been working for the supply of drinking water, transport, electric supply, education, health, agriculture, livestock farming and rural development in order to achieve multi-sectoral development.

Kayah State is in possession of cultures and traditions as well as mountains, streams and natural beauty which are the good basic conditions where tourism can thrive successfully, and we may perhaps call it a smoke-free industry. Therefore, we exerted continuous efforts to promote community-based tourism for foreign and local travellers starting from the end of 2014; this resulted in the gradual increase of foreign and local travellers. We are now seeing more job opportunities for local ethnic nationals and upgrading of their socio-economic development.

Due to the united efforts and cooperation of all ethnic nationals living in Kayah State, success has been achieved in each sector such as politics, economy and social sectors. You were given the Patient Safety Champion award in 2019 presented by the Ministry of Health and Sports, All-round achievement award for the 50-bed traditional medicine hospital, and first prize for enthusiastic participation in the states/regions December people's sports physical fitness movement. You have obtained all these awards deservedly. So I urge you all to keep up your good efforts.

Although we have encountered difficulties to implement development projects due to armed conflicts in Kayah State, as armed conflicts have decreased to a bare minimum, we have been able to carry out more regional development projects. As peace prevails in the countryside and transportation networks improve, the socio-economic life of ethnic nationals in Kayah State will improve. Therefore, I wish to urge the ethnic armed organizations in Kayah State in great seriousness to join hands and participate fully in the Union peace process and the political dialogues and discussions.

For peace and development which is necessary for the perpetuation of the Union, for establishing the Democratic Federal Union which is the aspiration of all ethnic nationals, we have already convened the Union Peace Conference – 21st Century Panglong meetings up to the fourth session. We have obtained several agreements. In accordance with the common agreements relating to democracy and the federal system which came out of these sessions, I wish to urge all the ethnic nationals to work together with the Union Government with the unity of spirit and desire for the establishment of a peaceful and developed Democratic Federal Union fully imbued with political essence having the characteristics of justice, freedom, equal opportunity, and self-determination. With these thoughts, I send this message of greetings on this auspicious occasion.

board and in the state-owned newspapers to ensure that the original owners would not lose their land ownership rights in case they could not be contacted.

The Vice-President explained that the government focussed on the return of confiscated lands to the owners as the agricultural lands are the lifeblood of farmers in an agro-based country like Myanmar.

He added that the return of seized lands would help in reducing both domestic migration and international migration, squatting in cities and preventing the loss of human resources from the country.

He also advised the farmland owners to cultivate high-quality crops by using mechanized farming, as they are responsible for socio-economic development of their families.

The Administration of Vacant, Fallow and Virgin Lands Law 2012 was amended on 11 September 2018, and the Farmland Law 2012 on 14 February 2020, to enable the original owners to manage their own lands in the agricultural sectors, lands related to culture and tradition

Myanmar, US and a number of South-East Asian countries discuss opportunities for strengthened regional multilateral partnerships

U THAUNG TUN, Union Minister for Investment and Foreign Economic Relations, yesterday presented a keynote address during a virtual workshop titled ‘COVID-19 and Beyond: Multilateral Cooperation to Enhance Resiliency’, organized by the US-based Asia-Pacific Centre for Security Studies (APCSS).

Facilitated by Dr Miemie Winn Byrd, participants used the event to share updates, insights, and regional perspectives

Union Minister U Thaung Tun participates in the virtual workshop titled ‘COVID-19 and Beyond: Multilateral Cooperation to Enhance Resiliency’ on 14 January 2021. PHOTO: MNA

“I believe that Myanmar and the region would benefit greatly from the US that seeks to leverage its strengths in response to Asia that exists today, with all its complexity. Just as the US and ASEAN have been cooperating to advance our mutual interests for 40 years, let us reign in tendencies toward strategic competition in favour of strategic cooperation.”

on respective responses to the COVID-19 pandemic and to identify recommendations aimed at enhancing assistance provided by the US and partners.

The Union Minister drew attention to recent progress made in the fight against COVID-19, citing global economic recoveries now occurring, vaccine distribution drives, and the potential for a newfound sense of bipartisanship and multilateral cooperation, noting that at some point in the coming months, rates of injection would overtake rates of infection and that the light at the end of the tunnel would begin to shine brighter.

The Union Minister expressed a belief that the pandemic has helped bring to the fore three distinct yet intertwined challenges, namely climate change, inequality of opportunity, and major geopolitical re-alignments.

On climate change, the Union Minister noted that while COVID-19 may be the worst pandemic experienced within our lifetimes, it is not the first nor will it be the last. Numerous diseases have emerged in recent years as a result of unchecked human trespass into natural ecosystems. The Union Minister also noted that Myanmar continues to contend with more extreme storms, more damaging cyclones and more intense heatwaves, in addition to changing disease patterns. However, the Union Minister also highlighted that there was still good news to be found, stating that our people are turning toward more environmentally friendly ways of living. He said that Myanmar was witnessing the growth of a new generation who are speaking out in opposition to climate change and in support of more climate-friendly policies – taking advantage of Myanmar’s new era of openness, and freedom of expression.

Regarding rising inequality, the Union Minister stated that while Myanmar has remained amongst the region’s fastest-growing economies, with GDP expected to grow 6 per cent in 2021, policymakers and partners must contend with the fact that not all of Myanmar’s people have truly benefitted from this growth, with rural areas still lagging in access to public services, and with unequal access to secondary education exacerbating a range of inequalities, including gender inequality.

Addressing geopolitical shifts accentuated by COVID-19, the Union Minister called for increased collaboration able to span ideology and culture, and for partners to direct every effort toward ensuring the proven and potential benefits of globalization are shared more equitably across society.

“In this more complex, multipolar world, no man, or woman, can be an island unto him or herself. No one country can lead alone.”

The Union Minister made three concrete recommendations that could contribute to stronger

US-Myanmar ties and broader multilateral partnerships.

First, he underscored the need for the fast-tracking of transitions toward more renewable sources of energy. In this regard, the Minister welcomed President-elect Biden’s commitment to rejoining the Paris Agreement, and updated participants on Myanmar’s recent Nationally Determined Contribution, including reducing CO2 emissions, increasing the share of renewable energy and reducing net emissions from the forestry sector.

Second, the Union Minister called for further support to the region’s digital transition, noting that, with relatively modest investments, countries like Myanmar can offer almost universal access to e-government, e-payment and e-commerce, telemedicine, and help facilitate the transfer of international skilled labour throughout the world.

The Union Minister concluded by calling for continued US engagement in the Asia Pacific Region. He urged countries to reign in tendencies toward strategic competition in favour of strategic cooperation. He said instead of viewing rising Asia as uniquely a security challenge, countries should see the changes in the region as an economic opportunity.

The Union Minister also took the opportunity to call for increased US investment in Myanmar, noting how US investment was welcomed to play a key role in catalyzing Myanmar’s broader economic recovery, stating:

“I believe that Myanmar and the region would benefit greatly from the US that seeks to leverage its strengths in response to Asia that exists today, with all its complexity. Just as the US and ASEAN have been cooperating to advance our mutual interests for 40 years, let us reign in tendencies toward strategic competition in favour of strategic cooperation.”

“The US has some of the world’s greatest companies, world-class technology, and unparalleled connections to global supply chains. And yet, US firms in Myanmar are too few, and those that are here are shrinking in relative terms compared with regional investors.”

The Union Minister also used the opportunity to express sincere thanks to the United States Agency for International Development for its contribution to Myanmar’s COVID-19 response – including the provision of medical equipment and PPE, upgrades to the National Health Laboratory, and support channelled through the multi-donor Access to Health Fund.

The Honolulu-based APCSS is a centre of excellence renowned for its dedication to regional and global security issues, nurturing relationships, and cultivating new networks among security practitioners and national security establishments throughout the Asia-Pacific region.—MNA

605 new cases of COVID-19 reported on 14 January, total figure rises to 132,865

MYANMAR’S COVID-19 positive cases rose to 132,865 after 605 new cases were reported on 14 January 2021 according to the Ministry of Health and Sports. Among these 132,865 confirmed cases, 2,912 died, 116,100 have been discharged from hospitals.—MNA

The private sector will be encouraged

Rather than inviting investment proposals, opportunities will be created to attract local and foreign investments. Therefore, more infrastructures of domestic, international and joint-venture investments are expected to appear in the country in the near future. Financial and monetary stimulus packages will be effectively carried out based on the situations of economic response during and post COVID-19 crisis. Government budgets will be spent in areas where they will be effective, and the private sector will be encouraged.

Fishery export prices to Thailand plunge by 50 per cent

By Nyein Nyein

MYANMAR fishery products' export price to leading buyer Thailand slumped by 50 per cent, said U Win Kyaing, general secretary of Myanmar Fisheries Federation (MFF).

Myanmar mainly ships mackerel fish to Thailand through Kawthoung-Ranong border. It fetched 100-120 baht per kilo last year, and the price sharply fell to 50-55 baht per kilo.

"Thailand did not stop trading, yet the offering price drastically dropped. During a bear market, the income generated by fishery products also decreased. Surprisingly, the market experienced a 50 per cent drop", U Win Kyaing elaborated.

At present, the country is primarily conducting border trade with Thailand's neighbouring country through those border posts; Kawthoung-Ranong, Mawtaung in Myeik, Hteekhee in Dawei and Myawady.

Thailand has shut down the border with Hteekhee and Mawtaung. The central trading post (Kawthoung-Ranong) is still open for trading. However, to contain the spread of COVID-19, Myanmar traders cannot enter Thailand's side, and the trading occurred only at the pier.

Kawthoung-Ranong generated an income of US$250 million out of total fisheries export value with Thailand at $318 million in the previous financial year 2019-2020, MFF stated.

Thailand is the primary buyer of Myanmar's fisheries products. Last FY, Myanmar shipped $318 million worth fisheries products to Thailand, while the total fishery exports stood at $850 million.

The federation expects to reach fishery export target of $1 billion in the current FY2020-2021. Nevertheless, the fishery exports touched a low of $242.352 million between 1 October 2020 and 1 January 2021, which plunged from $261.994 million registered a year-ago period. The figures reflected a decrease of $19.6 million over the Q1 of the current FY compared with the last FY2019-2020, the Ministry of Commerce's data showed.

Salt production in Magway falls by 60% amid low demand

SALT production in Magway Region dropped by 60 per cent as the COVID-19 indirectly affected salt industry.

Earlier, a salt-making business on a manageable scale in Magway city daily produced about 250 visses (a viss equals 1.6kg). The salt makers reduce the daily production to 100 visses, according to salt making business in Aungmyittar Ward.

"Raw salt produced by lower Myanmar regions also enter Magway market. The producers make high-quality salt for restaurants and hotels. Pandemic shut down the schools, restaurants and other events. Consequently, the salt demand dropped. When things return to new normal, we can regularly produce the salt," said Daw Aye Wai, the salt producer. Salt making businesses includes pouring salt into large clay pots, clearing impurities, sand, weed, and small stones and refining steps.

If you make 50 visses of raw salt, 46 visses of quality salt are left. An Iodized salt packet receives K800 per viss, and they are distributed in the city, the salt marketer U Khin Maung Myint said. Myanmar has coast and inland salt productions. Myanmar's salt production heavily relies on domestic consumption. Salt from foreign countries also floods the market with lower price. — Zayyatu (Magway)

Returning confiscated lands carefully scrutinized

By returning over 8180 acres of confiscated land to farmers in Yaksauk Township, Taunggyi District, amidst COVID-19 pandemic yesterday, the Union Government has stepped up efforts for solving the confiscated farmland issues for the New Year.

A total of 1,116 farmers were granted land-use certificates or Form-7 in the presence of Vice-President U Henry Van Thio in Taunggyi yesterday.

The legal certificates would grant the farmers with the rights guaranteed by the 2012 farmland law and 2012 vacant, fallow and virgin land management law. They will benefit from the work they have done and their future generations will have the right to use the land.

Assessments are being carried out to return the remaining confiscated lands to farmers as soon as possible.

Regarding the solving of the farmland confiscation issues nationwide, it has been found that there have been delays in returning the farmland to farmers on the ground although the confiscated farmland had been released by the relevant ministries.

Hence, findings by the authorities and the situation on the ground need to be carefully scrutinized to ensure there are no differences between them.

Meanwhile, it should be worth noting that action would be taken against any personnel or officials who caused hindrances to the work of the relevant committees in assessing, reviewing and returning confiscated lands to the farmers and permitting them to work on these lands.

Members of the region and state farmland confiscation committees continue to go to the grassroots level and closely supervise cases and to check if the cases from regions and states are handled in accordance with the 52-point list of procedures, which has been implemented to resolve complicated land confiscation issues, based on paper documentation, evidence, and legal matters.

The manner in which the land confiscation issue is resolved would reflect on the image of the country. Land management must be carried out properly and with transparency, in accordance with the rules, regulations, and procedures laid down by law as this has a direct bearing on improving the socio-economic condition of the people.

Therefore, all levels of committees for scrutinizing confiscated farmlands and other lands need to effectively handle complaints on land matters according to the policies and work processes.

WHO HURRIES TO TACKLE CORONAVIRUS VARIANTS

WHO tackles new strains as China logs first Covid death in 8 months

Much of the planet is facing a second or third wave of infections, with populations chafing under painful and economically damaging restrictions.

GLOBAL health experts gather on Thursday to tackle new strains of the coronavirus blamed for a fresh surge in infections after China recorded its first Covid-19 death in eight months.

The World Health Organization (WHO) emergency committee session comes with their colleagues seeking the origins of the virus on a long-delayed mission to the pandemic ground zero in Wuhan.

Almost two million of the more than 91 million people who have caught the disease have died, but the figures are widely believed to be an underestimate.

Much of the planet is facing a second or third wave of infections, with populations chafing under painful and economically damaging restrictions.

Lebanon went into full lockdown on Thursday with residents barred even from grocery shopping. France is hoping to avoid another national lockdown with the government due to announce tighter controls such as an extended night curfew across the country.

But there was better news for those who have already had Covid-19, with a British study suggesting recovery can confer immunity for at least five months.

The research will be welcomed by UK healthcare workers struggling to cope with surging caseloads and a new, more infectious strain of the virus.

That strain, and another identified in South Africa, was going under the WHO microscope in Geneva on Thursday after being logged in dozens of countries.

WHO's emergency committee normally gathers every three months, but the meeting was brought forward "to consider issues that need urgent discussion".

In China, millions of people have been locked down again to try to tame a fresh outbreak that has now claimed its first victim.

Long journey
The hashtag "New virus death in Hebei" quickly ratcheted up 100 million views on the Twitter-like Weibo platform.

"I haven't seen the words 'virusdeath' in so long, it's a bit shocking! I hope the epidemic can pass soon," one user wrote.

The death comes as a 10-strong investigation team arrived in Wuhan, where the virus emerged in late 2019.

Mission leader Peter Ben Embarek said they would enter a two-week hotel quarantine before the probe begins in earnest.

It "could be a very long journey before we get a full understanding of what happened," he cautioned.

Beijing has argued Wuhan might not be where the virus originated, only where it was first identified. Regardless of origins, scientists say large-scale vaccination is the only way out.

Inoculation campaigns have kicked off in a number of countries, although progress has often been slow.

In the United States, where more than 4,000 people are dying every day, around 10 million have received a first shot.

Turkish medics rolled up their sleeves on Thursday as the nation of 83 million launched a vaccination drive with China's Sinovac jab despite conflicting data about its efficacy.

Preliminary studies involving more than 7,000 volunteers in Turkey showed it to be 91.25 per cent effective.

A bigger trial in Brazil showed 50.4 per cent efficacy and a third in Indonesia gave 65.3 per cent.

In Africa, where many countries have so far avoided the worst of the pandemic, governments were urged to take urgent steps to prepare for vaccine distribution.

"We cannot wait," said John Nkengasong, director of the continent's health watchdog, after the African Union secured 270 million doses. "We have to do it quick. Our economies are down, our people are dying."

At the Vatican, Pope Francis, aged 84, and his predecessor, former pope Benedict XVI, 93, have both received vaccines, the Vatican said Thursday. However former world tennis number one Andy Murray has reportedly returned a positive coronavirus test throwing his participation in the Australian Open into doubt. He was among 1,200 players due to travel to Melbourne for 14 days' quarantine ahead of the delayed tournament starting February 8.

One million pilgrims

Sport has provided some diversion for many trapped at home, but top-flight athletes were warned this week to lead by example.

English Premier League bosses warned clubs they could be sanctioned if players shake hands or hug after goals.

EPL chief executive Richard Masters said the Premier League "must take the lead in setting the right example to follow".

However a British lawmaker branded footballers "brainless".

"Some of the scenes we have seen have been brainless and give out an awful message," said Julian Knight, chairman of the House of Commons Media and Sport committee. In India, up to a million Hindu pilgrims were massing by the Ganges river on Thursday for the Kumbh Mela festival outside the northern town of Haridwar. "I'm sure Maa Ganga will take care of their safety," he said, referring to the sacred river.

RESEARCHERS FROM PUBLIC HEALTH ENGLAND'S SIREN STUDY

After Covid-19 infection health workers 83% protected: study

Large study of UK healthcare workers suggests that most people are immune for months after catching COVID-19 for the first time.

HEALTHCARE workers who have recovered from Covid-19 are largely protected against falling ill again for at least five months, a British study has found, but researchers warned some people could still carry and transmit the virus.

Healthcare workers are among those most exposed to the SARS-Cov-2 coronavirus, as countries across the world have grappled with waves of infections in the year since it first emerged.

Researchers from Public Health England's SIREN study detected 44 potential reinfections out of 6,614 participants, who had already tested positive for antibodies in a five-month period between June and November 2020.

In their first published report — which has not yet been peer reviewed — the authors said this represents an 83 per cent rate of protection from reinfection.

But they warned that although antibodies may confer some protection from becoming ill with Covid-19, early evidence from the next stage of the study suggests that some of these individuals carry high levels of virus and could continue to transmit it to others.

"This study has given us the clearest picture to date of the nature of antibody protection against Covid-19 but it is critical people do not misunderstand these early findings," said lead author Susan Hopkins, senior medical advisor at Public Health England and the SIREN study lead.

"We now know that most of those who have had the virus, and developed antibodies, are protected from reinfection, but this is not total and we do not yet know how long protection lasts. Crucially, we believe people may still be able to pass the virus on."

Getting it twice?

Independent experts welcomed the paper from the SIREN study, which has recruited almost 20,800 healthcare workers — including frontline clinical staff — to undergo regular testing to see if they have the virus or antibodies to show a past infection.

Danny Altmann, professor of immunology at Imperial College London and British Society for Immunology spokesperson, said Siren had collected a "really important" dataset of healthcare workers.

But he added it could be "disappointing to put hard numbers to the idea that immunity to this virus is seemingly so variable and feeble that there is a greater than one in 10 chance of suffering reinfection even at five months, let alone now, when many UK healthcare workers are more than nine months out from infections in the first wave".

DISPOSABLE WASTE

Mexico City plastic ban poses challenge for virus-hit firms

MEXICO'S ban on single-use plastic in its capital, one of the world's most populous metropolises, has delighted environmentalists but dismayed some businesses struggling to cope with the coronavirus pandemic. Home to around nine million people, Mexico City generates about 13,000 tonnes of solid waste every day.

The new rules, which are being phased in, ban the use of disposable plastic items such as cutlery, plates, cups, straws and food trays, in addition to a year-old ban on plastic bags.

The move poses yet another challenge for Celina Aguilar, whose restaurant has had to close twice due to the pandemic and like others now relies on takeout or home delivery.

"We still haven't recovered from the losses (of the first closure). Now everyone must change to biodegradable packaging or they fine you," Aguilar complained.

Since December 18, Mexico City has banned non-essential activities including dining in restaurants in an attempt to curb the soaring number of coronavirus infections.

The plastics ban "affects us a lot because right now we're doing takeaway only, and how can we give it to the customers?" said food vendor Martin Matias. "It's a daily battle in this situation."

Environmental group Greenpeace Mexico argues that businesses in the city have had plenty of time to prepare for the change.

KUMBH MELA

Coronavirus fails to deter massive Hindu Ganges pilgrimage

Hindu devotees gather at a ghat of the River Ganges ahead of the religious Kumbh Mela festival. PHOTO: AFP

HINDU pilgrims flocked to the Ganges river in India Wednesday, shrugging off the risk of coronavirus a day before the start of the Kumbh Mela -- a religious festival that attracts millions each time it is held.

Despite India having the second most coronavirus infections in the world -- and more than 150,000 deaths -- the virus has not stopped devout Hindus from making the pilgrimage.

"The pandemic is a bit of a worry, but we are taking all precautions," said organizer Siddharth Chakrapani, who expected between 800,000 to a million people to attend on Thursday alone.

"I'm sure Maa Ganga will take care of their safety," he added, referring to the river considered holy by the faithful.

According to Hindu mythology, gods and demons fought a war over a sacred pitcher containing the nectar of immortality. Drops fell at four different locations, which now alternate as hosts for the immense gatherings.

Recognized as a cultural heritage by UNESCO in 2017, the last Kumbh Mela in Allahabad in 2019 attracted around 55 million people over 48 days.

This year, beginning Thursday, Haridwar in northern India is the host, and several million people were expected to throng the holy city in Uttarakhand state over the coming seven weeks.

THE ORIGINS OF THE CORONAVIRUS

WHO team arrives in Wuhan as China reports first virus death in months

A team of experts from the World Health Organization arrived in Wuhan on Thursday to start a probe into the origins of the coronavirus, as China reported its first death from Covid-19 in eight months. The 10 scientists, who must complete a two-week quarantine in Wuhan before starting their work, arrived for their mission to examine the origins of the pandemic. The virus was first detected in the central Chinese city of Wuhan in late 2019 and has since billowed out across the world. State broadcaster CGTN showed the plane carrying the team arrive from Singapore to be met by Chinese officials in full hazmat suits. Their trip comes as more than 20 million people are under lockdown in the north of China and one province has declared an emergency, with Covid-19 numbers climbing after several months of being relatively static.

China had largely brought the pandemic under control through strict lockdowns and mass testing, hailing its economic rebound as an indication of strong leadership by the Communist authorities. But another 138 infections were reported by the National Health Commission on Thursday -- the highest single-day tally since March last year. Clusters are still small compared with many countries contending with rampant infections and record numbers of deaths, and the first virus fatality in several months -- reported in northern Hebei province -- seeded alarm across China.

Beijing is anxious to stamp out local clusters ahead of next month's Lunar New Year festival when hundreds of millions of people will be on the move across the country. Health authorities gave no details about the latest death except that it occurred in Hebei province, where the government has placed several cities under lockdown. As infections have spread, northeastern Heilongjiang declared an "emergency state" on Wednesday, telling its 37.5 million residents not to leave the province unless absolutely necessary.

THREE-WEEK LOCKDOWN

Dutch extend coronavirus curbs until February 9

THE Netherlands is extending coronavirus restrictions until February 9 as infections are still high and the government is "very concerned" about the UK variant of the disease, Prime Minister Mark Rutte said Tuesday.

Under the current restrictions, which were due to expire on January 18, schools have been closed, all but essential shops are closed, and people are banned from having more than two people in their homes.

"I don't think I am going to surprise you this evening, we had to decide to extend the lockdown by three weeks," Rutte told a televised news conference.

VAST PROPOSALS

Markets mainly rise with Biden stimulus in focus

ASIAN and European markets mostly advanced Thursday as investors awaited Joe Biden's proposals for substantial new stimulus, and the US Federal Reserve's policy outlook.

The London stock market climbed 0.6 per cent in late morning deals, while Frankfurt rose 0.3 per cent and Paris added 0.2 per cent in midday eurozone trade.

Bitcoin gained for a third day, increasing by 2.2 per cent to $38,090 on keen demand, but remained under the record $41,981 set on Friday. The US dollar wavered against the euro and yen, while oil prices steadied.

"A more positive tone in markets has developed ahead of the expected stimulus announcement from Joe Biden," noted Chris Beauchamp, chief market analyst at trading firm IG.

"Investors (are) hoping that the president-elect will move quickly and in substantial form to secure a new package that will bolster the US economy as the vaccine programme moves into a higher gear," he added. News that Donald Trump had been impeached for a historic second time appeared to have little immediate impact on sentiment, despite worries about more unrest ahead of Biden's inauguration on January 20. Hopes for another huge spending splurge in the world's top economy overshadowed fears about surging virus cases -- and record daily deaths in the US and Britain -- that have forced governments to impose new lockdowns. Analysts said a drug being developed by pharma giant Johnson & Johnson could make a huge difference as it would only need one jab and can be transported more easily.

WAITING TIMES

Brexit adds to airline virus woes in Britain

No-frills airlines, such as Ryanair and EasyJet, are notably affected, with their business model based heavily on flying customers across the European Union. PHOTO: AFP/FILE

ALREADY grounded by the coronavirus pandemic, airlines operating in the UK are facing post-Brexit obstacles to flying across the European Union, and their shareholders are paying the price.

The trade agreement reached ahead of Britain's recent formal divorce from the EU allows flights between the two to continue as before.

But for airlines with fewer than 50 per cent EU-based shareholders, flights within the European Union require a new agreement by the end of 2021.

"To continue being able to access these intra-European traffic rights, airlines need to demonstrate they are majority-owned and controlled by European persons," noted Bernstein analyst Daniel Roeska.

No-frills airlines, such as Ryanair and EasyJet, are notably affected, with their business model based heavily on flying customers across the European Union, such as French and German tourists to holiday destinations in Spain and Greece.

'Added costs'

"There has been sufficient time to prepare" for the changes, said independent aviation analyst John Strickland, with Britain voting in favour of exiting the EU 4.5 years ago.

However the required changes in shareholder ownership "adds additional cost and complexity", he said, at a time when the global aviation sector is suffering huge losses on Covid fallout.

"Such (ownership) constraints do not exist in most other industries," Strickland told AFP.

"Ensuring safety and strong competition should be the primary areas of focus, not ownership limitations," he stressed.

DRIP TRAYS

Brexit paperwork sours Belgian beer exports to UK

SOME suppliers of Belgian beers are waking up to a post-Brexit hangover as exporting their brews to thirsty British drinkers across the Channel becomes more difficult and prices go up. Rotsaert, a wholesaler stocking some of its country's most famous Trappist beers, sent off its last consignment to the UK on 29 December just two days before Britain left the EU's single market. Now Filip Rotsaert, who runs the firm with his brother, tells AFP that they have had to temporarily halt shipments to the UK. London and Brussels struck a trade deal on December 24 to stave off the damaging imposition of sweeping tariffs -- but the last-gasp agreement still didn't give the Bruges-based firm and the transporters it relies on enough time to prepare for the changes. "The shipping companies we work with are not ready with the paperwork to ship to the UK," Rotsaert explains. "We are working on it, and hopefully we can be ready at the end of January, beginning of February."

Tax tops up prices

After Belgium itself, the UK is the second-biggest market for the company that sends out its drinks across the whole of Europe. But even when the paperwork is solved, clients in Britain now face an unpleasant surprise when deliveries restart as the UK is set to slap on VAT of 20 per cent on top of a new export tax of 17.5 per cent for orders over 150 euros.

MOVING ON

Tech show offers transport solutions for Covid-changed world

THE global pandemic has put the brakes on a number of mobility trends, prompting the transportation industry to rethink strategy. New options on display at the all-digital 2021 Consumer Electronics Show underscore the changes in mobility during the global health crisis, with more personal vehicle use and less emphasis on sharing. Interest in electric vehicles meanwhile has accelerated in the wake of the stunning growth of Tesla, with many parts of the world seeing increased adoption. And more options are being offered for personal "micromobility" and delivery amid the surge in online commerce. General Motors offered its vision at CES this week, unveiling a new Bright Drop brand of electric delivery vans along with previews of its newer Bolt, Cadillac and Hummer electric vehicles. "Before the pandemic, shared mobility was the name of the game," said Axel Schmidt, global auto analyst with Accenture. "Covid-19 has put the brakes on this." SOURCE: AFP

China trade surplus with US widens 7.1% to $317 bn in 2020

CHINA'S trade surplus with the United States widened last year, underlining the failure of Donald Trump to narrow the gap during his tenure, while demand soared for electronics and medical equipment during the coronavirus pandemic. The pick-up came on the back of a jump in exports through most of last year as China's factories kicked back into gear from the second quarter following a strict lockdown that managed to broadly contain Covid-19 and allow economic activity to return. Trump had made addressing the gaping trade gap with China a priority when he took office four years ago, and signed a partial agreement with Beijing to boost the country's purchases of goods such as soybeans.

But Chinese customs data showed the surplus with the US climbed 7.1 per cent to $316.9 billion in 2020. The figure is a 14.9 per cent jump from 2017's surplus of $275.8 billion – which was already a sensitive political issue due to Trump's claims that China held unfair practices and killed US jobs.

While the world's second-largest economy suffered a record contraction in the first quarter of last year as the coronavirus essentially brought all activity to a halt, it soon recovered as lockdowns around the country were eased and people went back to work.

Total exports rose 3.6 per cent, though imports shrank 1.1 per cent. In December, however, both exports and imports rose more than expected, at 18.1 per cent and 6.5 per cent respectively. "With the pandemic under control in China, factories and export-oriented companies have resumed normal operations earlier than most other countries, allowing China to meet global demand better," said Axi strategist Stephen Innes.

S. Korea's import price rises 1.8 pct in December 2020

THE price for imported goods to South Korea recorded the first rebound in six months owing to higher global crude oil price, central bank data showed Thursday. The import price index gained 1.8 per cent in December last year from a month earlier, according to the Bank of Korea (BOK).

It was attributable to higher crude oil price. Dubai crude, South Korea's benchmark, averaged 49.84 U.S. dollars per barrel in December 2020, up from 43.42 dollars in the previous month. Price for imported raw materials advanced 6.9 per cent in December last year from the previous month amid expensive crude oil. Intermediary goods price added 0.8 per cent, but those for capital and consumer goods slumped 0.7 per cent and 1.0 per cent each.

The export price index fell 0.1 per cent in December 2020 from a month ago, keeping a downward trend for five straight months.

The price fall came on the back of the strong local currency. The won/dollar exchange rate averaged 1,095.13 won per dollar in December last year, down from 1,116.76 won per dollar in November 2020.

BOJ maintains economic views on 5 regions as pandemic persists

THE Bank of Japan on Thursday maintained its economic assessments on five of the nine regions amid a resurgence of coronavirus cases as Governor Haruhiko Kuroda expects the pace of recovery to be modest.

In its quarterly Sakura report, the assessment on Hokkaido in northern Japan was downgraded due to a slowing recovery while the BOJ raised its view on the remaining three regions, Hokuriku, Shikoku and Kyushu-Okinawa.

The economy was in a "severe" situation in many regions due to the pandemic, but signs of a pickup have emerged, the BOJ said. The report came amid reignited fears of a double-dip recession following a resurgence of the virus toward the end of 2020 and Japan's struggle to stem the rise.

Prime Minister Yoshihide Suga declared last week a new one-month state of emergency in the Tokyo metropolitan area, and expanded the measure to Osaka and six other prefectures on Wednesday.

Kuroda said earlier in the day that the BOJ will take additional easing steps if necessary to support the world's third-largest economy.

German economy sees biggest blow since financial crisis

GERMANY'S economy suffered its biggest contraction last year since the 2009 financial crash, as it was hit hard by the coronavirus pandemic, official data showed Thursday. Output shrank 5.0 per cent year-on-year, as "almost all economic sectors were markedly affected by the corona pandemic", the federal statistics agency

Destatis said. The downturn ended 10 years of growth, Destatis added, though its figure was better than the government's own forecast, which had anticipated a decline of 5.5 per cent. In 2009, in the midst of a global economic crisis, gross domestic product (GDP) had plunged by 5.7 per cent. "Measured against the original fears after the outbreak of the pandemic, this sad result is also a success in damage limitation," said Fritz Koehler-Geib, chief economist at the KfW public bank. The 2020 German slump is smaller than others recorded in France, Italy or Spain, where GDP is projected to have declined by 9.3, 9.0 and 11.1 per cent respectively, according to European Central Bank forecasts. 'INCITING' US CAPITOL RIOT

Trump impeached for unprecedented second time

THE House of Representatives was set to impeach "clear and present danger" President Donald Trump Wednesday, with several key Republicans backing the Democrat-led push to bring down the real estate tycoon in flames a week before he leaves office.

Donald Trump became the first US president in history to be impeached twice when the House of Representatives voted to charge him with inciting last week's mob attack on Congress.

"Today, in a bipartisan way, the House demonstrated that no one is above the law, not even the president of the United States," Democratic Speaker Nancy Pelosi said after Wednesday's vote.

The Senate will not hold a trial before January 20, when Democrat Joe Biden assumes the presidency, meaning the real estate tycoon will escape the ignominy of being forced to leave early. He is set, however, to face a Senate trial later, and if convicted he might be barred in a follow-up vote from seeking the presidency again in 2024.

"Donald Trump has deservedly become the first president in American history to bear the stain of impeachment twice over," said Democratic Senator Chuck Schumer, who in a week's time will become Senate leader.

"The Senate is required to act and will proceed with his trial."

In the House of Representatives, the only question was how many Republicans would join the lockstep Democratic majority in the 232-197 vote. Ten Republicans broke ranks, including the party's number three in the House, Liz Cheney.

"I am in total peace today that my vote was the right thing and I actually think history will judge it that way," said Adam Kinzinger, a vocal Trump critic and one of the Republicans who crossed the aisle.

Holed up in the White House, Trump issued a videotaped address in which he made no mention of impeachment.

EMBOLDENED AND UNAPOLOGETIC

Brazil's Bolsonaro increasingly isolated as Trump leaves

WHEN Jair Bolsonaro became Brazil's president in January 2019 he nurtured relationships with other like-minded, far-right governments, but as the political tide turns he now finds himself and his country increasingly isolated. Boasting close ties with US President Donald Trump, Bolsonaro was emboldened and unapologetic for a worldview often criticized as sexist, racist and homophobic, as well as his disdain for the environment. TURKEY'S defence minister has called on the United States to reopen talks about Ankara's controversial purchase of a Russian air defence system, urging Washington to move past sanctions and threats. POLITICAL CRISIS

Italian PM battles to keep government afloat

ITALIAN Prime Minister Giuseppe Conte was battling Thursday to keep his government afloat after a key coalition partner withdrew, sparking a political crisis in the middle of a raging pandemic.

Lawmakers on all sides demanded he set out what will happen next following the dramatic exit of former premier Matteo Renzi's Italia Viva party on Wednesday evening. The speaker of the lower house of parliament, Roberto Fico, suspended Thursday's proceedings and said he would call a meeting of all party chiefs. "I will contact Conte for the request to come to the chamber," he said, adding: "This House is not and cannot be indifferent to what is happening."

Renzi's two cabinet ministers and a junior minister quit the government Wednesday, breaking up the ruling centre-left coalition that has been in office in September 2019. With him went Italia Viva's 18 senators, leaving Conte without a majority in the Senate - although he still has one in the lower Chamber of Deputies. Renzi had for weeks been complaining about Conte's leadership, notably his handling of the coronavirus pandemic, which has plunged Italy into deep recession and claimed more than 80,000 lives. IN A GROUNDBREAKING CASE

French court to hear landmark case on climate inaction

A Paris court will begin hearing a complaint brought by NGOs backed by two million citizens on Thursday accusing the French state of failing to act to halt climate change. The NGOs want to the court to hold the state responsible for ecological damage and say victory would mark a symbolic step in the fight to persuade governments to do more. An international accord signed in Paris five years ago aims to limit global warming to less than 2 degrees Celsius over pre-industrial levels, and preferably to 1.5

degrees. But experts say governments are far from meeting their commitments and anger is growing among the younger generation over inaction, symbolised by the campaigns of Swedish teenager Greta Thunberg. The French case is part of a mounting push from climate campaigners across the world to use courts against governments. In 2019, the Dutch Supreme Court ordered the Netherlands to slash its greenhouse gas emissions by at least 25% of 1990 levels by the end of 2020 after a case brought by an NGO. The French case began in December 2018 when four NGOs accused the government of failing to reduce emissions in a formal complaint backed by more than two million people in an online petition - a French record.

CORRUPTION SCANDAL

S. Korea's top court upholds ex-president's 20-year jail term

SOUTH KOREA'S top court upheld a 20-year prison sentence for disgraced former president Park Geun-hye on Thursday, in the final ruling over the corruption scandal that brought her down.

The decision brings to an end an extended legal process that involved multiple trials and appeals, including a previous Supreme Court hearing.

The country's first female president was impeached in 2017 after huge street protests against her rule.

She was convicted the following year of bribery and abuse of power and jailed for 30 years. A series of appeals, a retrial and further appeals followed which reduced her sentence to 20 years.

On Thursday, the case went for a second time before the Supreme Court, which said it accepted and confirmed the 20-year sentence.

The court also upheld fines and forfeits totalling 21.5 billion won (US$19.5 million). Park has been boycotting the proceedings, saying they are biased against her, and was not present in court on Thursday. SOURCE: AFP

"Art in Pandemic" kicks off

FIVE impressionists have staged an exhibition in line with health guidelines, showing over 40 works created in pandemic.

The show titled "Art in Pandemic" kicked off yesterday at the KaLaSa Art Space located at No. 131, 1st Floor, 34th St Middle Block, Kyauktada Township.

A maximum number of visitors to the exhibition is 20, and washing hands, wearing masks and social distancing mandatory rules for the visitors, said Su Htwe, the curator of the art space.

The exhibition reflects how Myanmar artists are passing the days in pandemic while staying at home.

"I am choked with staying at home. It is very tiring of me to stay at home, without travelling," said Htoo Aung Kyaw, an artist who participated in the show.

"To create paintings in the pandemic, we have to recall our memories before the pandemic and capture them on canvas and paper," said the artist.

The young artist has shown its works on Bagan, Ngapali, Mingun and other scenes.

Another young artist Aung Ko living in Shwetaung in western Bago Region sent his artworks to the exhibition as he is Due to pandemic, another impressionist Shwe Thein has shifted his brilliant boat subject to roses and still life in this exhibition. Artist Aung Si Thu's transparent watercolour works of rural sceneries are also on display. The 67-year-old artist Ko Maung Kyaw Than, who is a prominent figure in the Myanmar art scene, retired from the Yangon State School of Fine Arts seven years ago, also displayed acrylic works on landscapes in Myanmar.

The exhibition will be held from 14 to 19 January.

Fines for US lawmakers who refuse to walk through metal detectors

US lawmakers who refuse to go through metal detectors installed at the House of Representatives after last week's Capitol riot will be fined, Speaker Nancy Pelosi said late Wednesday.

The fine for the first offense will be $5,000, and $10,000 for the second, Pelosi said in a statement. Fines will be docked directly from members' salaries. "It is tragic that this step is necessary, but the Chamber of the People's House must and will be safe," Pelosi said as she announced the measure. Tighter safety rules came into effect after a mob of supporters of President Donald Trump violently broke into the building on January 6 in an attempt to stop the certification of Joe Biden as the next US president.

Five people died in the day of violence. Metal detectors were installed at the entrances to the US House for the first time Tuesday in response to the riot. Magneto-

Mobile internet in Cuba

SINCE arriving in Cuba just two years ago, mobile internet has revolutionized life here -- helping people find food, fuel and even medicine amid crippling shortages, and helping them organize protests in a country where waving a placard can land you in deep trouble.

Many in the Americas' only communist-ruled state now wonder how they ever lived without it. On the WhatsApp group Red Solidaria (Solidarity network), questions about basic necessities abound: "Flour please??", "Has anyone seen toilet paper??", or even "Does anyone know where to find milk?."

Other online groups allow people to sell or exchange hard-to-come-by products: one user who goes by Gaby is looking to swap shower gel for toilet paper and soft drinks, while Leo is offering cooking oil and soap in exchange for baby food.

MYANMAR men's national football team head coach Antoine Hey arrived back to Yangon on 13 January by air from Germany for restarting his team training, according to the statement with the Myanmar Football Federation.

He underwent a COVID-19 test in Germany with a negative result before landing in Myanmar and he is currently in quarantine at Novotel Yangon Max Hotel for his COVID-19 retest.

After his quarantine with the COVID-19 negative test result, he will start the football team training, said MFF football authorities.

The 50-year-old German football coach has been a manager of team Myanmar since October 2019. Antoine Hey assisted team Myanmar in securing two straight wins in the Group F of the World Cup Qualifiers in November 2019.

With the supervision of the head coach, Myanmar beat Tajikistan 4-3 and also took victory over Mongolia by 1-0 within a month in the Group F to bag 6 points.

The Myanmar national team will play an away match against Japan national team in the 2022 FIFA World Cup Asian Qualifiers Group-F on 25 March and a home match against Kyrgyzstan on 30 March.

The Myanmar national team will run their training session this month in accordance with the guidelines of the Ministry of Health and Sports, said the source with the Myanmar Football Federation. — Lynn Thit (Tgi) ■

Barca reach Spanish Super Cup final after Ter Stegen penalty heroics

MADRID—Marc-Andre ter Stegen's heroics ensured Barcelona edged past Real Sociedad on penalties on Wednesday to reach the Spanish Super Cup final, without the injured Lionel Messi.

Messi was watching on as Ter Stegen did his best to fill the void in Cordoba, the goalkeeper immense both in the shoot-out and during normal time, which had finished 1-1.

Frenkie de Jong's header was cancelled out by a penalty from Mikel Oyarzabal, who then missed in the shoot-out, one of two crucial saves made by Ter Stegen before 21-year-old Riqui Puig hit the winning shot.

"I wasn't down to take one but we needed one more taker and I stepped forward," said Puig.

Barca advance to meet either Real Madrid or Athletic Bilbao in the final on Sunday, when Messi is expected to be available again, although coach Ronald Koeman was cautious at full-time. "We have to wait," he said. Koeman's team have a mountain to climb in La Liga's title race but they are improving, now nine games unbeaten and with a trophy in their grasp.

This is the second year of the Spanish Super Cup's new format, which has four teams playing each other in a semi-final and final.

Athletic Bilbao and Real Sociedad joined after reaching the final of last season's Copa del Rey, which is still to be played, while Barcelona finished runners-up to Madrid in La Liga. — AFP ■

Rafia rescues Juve to join Napoli, Inter, Milan in Italian Cup quarters

MILAN—Tunisian midfielder Hamza Rafia came off the bench to score an extra-time winner on his debut as Juventus battled past Genoa 3-2 to reach the Italian Cup quarter-finals on Wednesday.

Rafia, 21, came on with quarter of an hour to go in regular time and scored his first Juventus goal after 105 minutes in Turin. Andrea Pirlo's side had let a two-goal advantage slip to allow Genoa back into the game.

Cristiano Ronaldo started on the bench with forward Alvaro Morata and defender Giorgio Chiellini returning from injury.

Chiellini set up Dejan Kulu-sevski to open the scoring after two minutes in the Allianz Stadium.

Kulusevski then sent through for Morata to double their tally after 23 minutes.

But five minutes later Lenart Czyborra headed in to revive Genoa hopes.

Filippo Melegoni curled in the equalizer from outside the box, beating veteran keeper Gianluigi Buffon with quarter of an hour to go. Ronaldo came off the bench with two minutes to go in regular time.

The Portuguese forward had a role in the winner, sending Morata through to tee up Rafia with Brazilian Arthur saving Juventus by heading off the line three minutes later. Juventus, the record 13-time winners, next meet either Sassuolo or SPAL.—AFP ■

In-form Foden is natural fit for England, says Guardiola

LONDON—Phil Foden should be an automatic pick for England at this year's delayed European Championship after his outstanding season so far, says Manchester City manager Pep Guardiola.

The 20-year-old midfielder scored his eighth goal of the season as City beat Premier League strugglers Brighton 1-0 on Wednesday – their seventh successive win in all competitions.

City climbed to third spot in the table, just four points behind leaders Manchester United and one point adrift of Liverpool with a game in hand on the champions.

Guardiola praised his young match-winner, who is City's leading goalscorer this season.

"In the last few days, Phil has played against (Chelsea's Cesar) Azpilicueta, one of the most incredible defenders in the Premier League, and was outstanding," he said.

"It was the same against (Manchester United's). I am pretty sure he would be selected (for England) if it was me. "(England manager) Gareth (Southgate), I don't know but I am sure he was really impressed by him, like all of us."

Foden first sprang to prominence when England won the Under-17 World Cup in 2017 and has since earned three senior caps.—AFP ■
